How Donald Duck Got on U.S. Payroll

By Bill Drummond

WASHINGTON. Oct 27 - The General Accounting Office disclosed yesterday that it successfully inserted Donald Duck's name on the payroll of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development — and gave him a salary of $99,999 a year.

The department computer, which is supposed to head off such shenanigans, not only failed to detect the "hiring" of the cartoon character, it raised no objections to his salary — more than twice the legal limit of $47,500 for a civil-service job.

It was not revealed what, if any, task Donald was supposed to perform at HUD, where 16,000 employees are charged with "providing for sound development of the nation's communities and metropolitan areas.

Officials of the GAO, Congress' watchdog over federal spending, disclosed the incident in testimony before the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee's subcommittee on compensation and employee benefits. The subcommittee is looking into abuses of federal overtime pay.

$1.5 Billion Overtime

Last fiscal year the government spent $1.5 billion on overtime pay, an increase of $300 million over the previous year.

After hearing the GAO officials, Rep. Gladys Spellman, D-Mo., the subcommittee chairman, remarked, "If Donald Duck can earn as much as he did, then something is very wrong . . . We must assure that every system is foolproof and fraud-proof." John Cronin, assistant director of GAO, said Donald Duck's name was one of 30 fictitious identities placed in the HUD payroll system to determine whether an employee skilled in computer manipulations could defraud the government, or whether the system could thwart such efforts. The computer detected none of the 30

phony names, Mr. Cronin said. He testified that 40 percent of the government's payroll systems have not been approved by the GAO, although under a 26-year-old law the agency is supposed to review and approve all such federal

H.L. Krieger, director of the GAO personnel and compensation division, told the subcommittee about the results of spot checks the agency had conducted at four government offices - the Drug Enforcement Agency, the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and the U.S. Forest Ser-

GAO found numerous weaknesses in accounting procedures, as well as several possible cases of fraud, which have been referred to the Justice Department for possible prosecution, Mr. Krieger said. Mr. Krieger also said he had been informed that the Internal Revenue Service intended to prosecute 13 suspected cases of overtime abuse and that HEW had uncovered five apparent cases of overtime fraud, involving a total of $75,000.

According to Mr. Cronin, the Departments of Defense and Health. Education and Welfare — whose spending accounts for

EEC Aide Strongly Urges U.S. To Act to Cut Oil Consumption

European Common Market's energy commissioner urged world oil producers today not to raise prices at their meeting in December and called on the United States to take strong action to cut oil consumption -- possibly including a consumer price hike. The remarks by Guido Brunner were the first direct comment by the nine-nation European bloc on the mid-December meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) in Abu Dhabi, and one of the sharpest European warnings to the United States on energy consumption. "My feeling is that something additional is now needed by the U.S. government after the measures already taken," Mr. Brunner said. referring to the progress made in implementing U.S. energy-saving programs. Otherwise, we will glide into a situation of increasing energy consumption."

On OFEC oil prices, Mr. Brunner said that "a price increase at this stage is not warranted by the market situation." He conceded that the dollar's falling value has cost oil producers money, but he added. "That, on its own, is not a good enough reason for a rise in prices in the oil sector."

"My concern is particular directed at the effect that an increase [in oil prices] could have on the value of the dollar." Mr. Brunner, a West German, said.

He predicted that OPEC countries will continue to use the dollar as the pricing mechanism for oil and added that "it would be good from the point of view of the OPEC countries - from the dollar standpoint - to omit a price increase at this stage."

Mr. Brunner said that the Common Market nations have not increased their energy consumption since 1973, but that U.S. consumpion has kept increasing.

He noted that President Carter.

clined to propose any percentage increases or to state how they should be accomplished. He strongly suggested, however, that the U.S. action be taken before the OPEC meeting starting Dec. 16, presuma-bly in an effort to head off a price increase there.

Since Congress has adjourned for the year, Mr. Brunner was asked if he favored administrative action by Mr. Carter to raise the price of U.S. oil imports.

West Ready to Consider New Aid Package to Zaire

PARIS, Oct. 27 (IHT) — Western governments who have been aiding the recovery of Zaire since the Shaba invasion last spring will meet in Brussels next month to consider a new assistance package, probably worth about $500 million, mainly to cover the foreign exchange needs of Zaire's slowly rebuilding economy, according to business and other sources.

The initial three-month phase of the Western rescue plan for President Mobutu Sese Seko has been reasonably successful, but slower than hoped," a source said.

Zaire has achieved a political reconciliation with its hostile neighbors and has started attracting once-dissident refugees back to have arisen in rebuilding the Zairian Army and improving the country's financial administration.

Despite initially encouraging signs, Zaire's credit-rating still re-flects investor skepticism.

'Zaire couldn'i borrow a dime commercially," a banker said. Other sources argued that the Shaba invasion, the second in two years, finally "scared" Mr. Mobutu into cooperating in implementing reforms urged by his Western and African supporters.

The Western plan, which essentially constitutes economic and sepervision and some political gui-dance, was divided into three stages: an emergency $117 million in short-term aid in June, the additional credits under consideration and, ultimately, a long-range "Mobutu plan" to attract $1 billion in investment to develop Zaire's abundant mineral resources.

Already Shaba's copper mines are back in operation. Foreign technicians, mostly Belgians, without their families, are protected by an inter-African force drawn from Senegal, Morocco and other friend-

There is one television set in black Africa for every 525 persons, one edition of a daily newspaper for every 210 persons, and one ra-dio for every 20 persons. While newspaper circulation has declined since these countries gained independence, and the use of television has risen only modestly, the num-ber of radios in Africa has increased from less than 500,000 in 1955 to about 22.5 million today. There is hardly a household, no matter how poor, without one.

Given radio's huge audience in Africa, it is not surprising that con-trol of the radio station is always a prime target during a coup. In a typical scenario, the white mercenaries who overthrew the Comoran government last May had three military objectives: the presidential villa, the army barracks and the government radio station.

When the Sevchelles government was overthrown last year, the rebels had put together a special tape to keep the population calm. It consisted of Peter, Paul and Mary songs. Several hours of martial music preceded the announcement seven years ago on Voice of Uganda that a sergeant named Idi Amin had overthrown the government. And when, without explanation last August, the Voice of Kenya sud-denly began playing the national anthem and funeral music, everyone knew that President Jomo Kenyatta had died.

U.S. Investments Again Rising in Ulster

By Ed Blanche

BELFAST, Oct. 27 (AP) - U.S. investment in Northern Ireland is picking up again after an eight-year full and the British government is counting on it to give the province an economic boost that could help end the troubles. General Motors, Goodyear

Tires, the Hughes Tool Co. Ford and AVX Corp. of New York are among U.S. companies which have announced investment of about $100 million in the last 18 months. All told, 35 U.S.-owned companies now operate or are setting up in the province. They employ 18,000 persons, more than 12 percent of the labor force, with a total investment of more than $800 mil-

British officials believe that the new wave of U.S. investment, coming amid a sharp drop in sectarian violence, signals renewed business confidence in Northern Ireland.

Hungry Period

"We went through a long, hun-gry period after 1969 when the vio-lence started," said Larry Nixon of the Northern Ireland Commerce Department. "Now were back in the ball game."

But he warned: "American companies already operating here have now reached saturation point. We must find other investors to keep up the pace of development."

Government officials fear that unless substantial investment continues, Northern Ireland's economy will decline sharply, rekindling sec-tarian violence which in turn will scare off much-needed investment. Virtually all investment halted in 1969. Terrorists of the mainly Roman Catholic Irish Republican Army, fighting to end British rule and Protestant domination of the province, bombed businesses and factories and assassinated business leaders in a bid to wreck the econo-

Twenty factories were destroyed by bombs and city centers were gutted. A recent report by a Cambridge University economics team estimated that the troubles have cost 20,000 jobs. World recession also slowed investment.

Source of Unrest

The British last year launched a drive to revive the province's battered economy and ease a major source of unrest. The government put together incentive packages aimed primarily at U.S. businesses seeking a tariff-dodging base within the European Common Market. It also stressed Ulster's lack of labor unrest and high productivity.

The incentives include tax relief, construction and machinery grants of up to 50 percent, government loans to get enterprises off the ground and low factory rents.

Northern Ireland Secretary Roy Mason declared: "We've created a package of financial inducements which is one of the best in Western

Despite the hopeful signs, Ulster's unemployment level is the worst in more than 40 years nearly 70,000 jobless, or 13 per cent of the work force, with the minority Roman Catholic community suffering most.

Some Catholic areas have unemployment levels of up to 30 per cent. One family in the border town of Strabane has only one work-age member out of eight in regular work and for three generations the head of clan has never had a steady

2 By-Election Triumphs Boost British Labor Party

By R.W. Apple Jr.

LONDON, Oct. 27 (NYT) - A pair of by-election successes has given Prime Minister James Callaghan's minority Labor government not only two extra votes for its coming showdown with op-position parties, but also a considerable psychological boost at a crucial moment.

Labor candidates triumphed yes-erday in the constituencies of Pontefract and Castleford, in Yorkshire, and Berwick and East Lothian, in the Scottish lowlands. The results of the voting, announced early today, showed a swing of 0.75 percent to Labor in Scotland and a swing of 7.9 percent to the Tories in Yorkshire.

The two new members are John Home Robertson, 30, who defeated Margaret Marshall in Berwick and East Lothian, and George Loft-house, who defeated Hugo Page in Pontefract and Castleford, Minorparty candidates trailed badly in both of the constituencies. A Tory spokesman said that he was "bitterly disappointed." Taking into account the by-election results as well as the death this morning of David Walder, 49, the Conservative member of Parliament for Clitheroe in Lancashire, Mr. Callaghan's government now has 14 sents less than the combined opposition. But Labor has three allies among members who are technically in opposition, so the realis-tic count is 311 to 319, a deficit of only 8 votes. Thus, Mr. Callaghan will survive the vote of confidence that is to follow the queen's speech next month if he can hold his troops in line and persuade the II Scottish nationalists either to support him or abstain. That seems highly likely, as the nationalists fared badly yesterday and are not eager to force a

Spanish Communists Avoid Recalling Trotsky Killer

By James M. Markham

MADRID, Oct. 27 (NYT) - The reported death last week of Ramon Mercader, the Spanish Communist who murdered Trotsky in 1940, has stirred faint, guilty murmurs on the Spanish left, and a notable silence among embarrassed Communists.

A successful novelist, Mr. Semprun entitled one of his pieces of fiction, published in 1969, "The Second Death of Ramon Mercader." Last week he penned a brief political obituary in a Madrid daily called "The Last Death of Ramon

"And today, in this day of Ramon Mercader's death, after so many decades of obstinate and fierce silence, will the companions of youth of this self-sacrificing comrade speak? who knew Mercader during the civil war, disclosed that she and others believed Stalin's assertion that Trotsky was a "Fascist agent," and kept their silence when they recognized photographs of the assassin, who maintained during 20 years in a Mexican prison that he was a Belgian named Jacques Mornard.

Blowing this cover story, she wrote, would have "harmed the party and, above all, the Soviet Union." Miss Pamies also suggested that Mercader's example should prompt Communists to understand how a militant could have been used for a crime coolly prepared in Bena's [Lavrenti Beria, head of the Soviet secret police under Stalin] laboratories against a political dissident." But she seems to admire Mercad-er's stoic, "intelligent" silence. "Any editor would have offered

'How and why I killed Trotsky,'

Cover Broken in 1952

It was only in 1952 that Mercader's cover story was broken. Prison guards heard the convicted assassin humming a lullaby in his native Ca-talan — a language known by few Belgians — and investigations quickly led back to Spain, where Franco's police turned up a hefty old file on Mercader, including his fingerprints.

According to several accounts, it was Mercader's strong-willed Cuban-born mother, Caridad Del Rio, an early Communist militant with ties to the GPU even before the civil war, who persuaded him to work for Stalin's secret police, probably in 1938.

Two years later, after having stealthily introduced himself in Trotsky's confidence by become a lover to one of his secretaries Mercader murdered him in the Bolshevik's fortified exile at Coyo can, Mexico. "They've got sand thing on me, they've imprisons my mother!" Mercader screams as Trotsky's bodyguards punned him, according to the historia Isaac Deutscher.

One of the busiest jetports in the United States, Los Angeles International expects to handle this year about 32 million passengers, sub-stantially more than the 20 million once considered as its ceiling. The growth of passenger traffic at the airport has been accompanied by auto congestion, aggravated by California's general disdain for mass transit.

Airport executives expect passenger traffic at the airport to reach 40 million within live years, but they say airport growth could be limited to a figure below that unless improvements are made. As at Kennedy International Airport, airline terminals here are situated along two arms of a loop-ing, horseshoe-shaped roadway. There are 13 airline terminal buildings on the loop, called World Way.

Most of the airport's problems

The concept approved by airport commissioners calls for the double-decking of World Way and the placing of rigid controls on the type of traffic allowed on the surfaceel street and the new deck above it. The upper deck - 60 feet wide will have four lanes, including one lane to be used exclusively by buses. There will also be exclusive bus lanes built to several airport parking lots.

Although engineers weighed pro-posals to build a "people mover" computerized transit system to move passengers, they delayed that decision because of concern about the reliability of such systems at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport and elsewhere. However, the elevated roadway was designed so that such a transit system could be added later.

U.K. Company Makes Airbus Decision Official

LONDON, Oct. 27 (AP) - The state-owned British Aerospace Corp. formally announced today its participation in the European Airbus consortium with France and

Terms of the agreement, which were outlined by the French Transport Ministry last Tuesday, include the investment of $50 million as Britain's share of Airbus Industries assets.

The announcement said British investment in the European aero-space firm will build to £ 250 million ($500 million) by 1983. It said protracted discussions about Britsh membership, since the initialing of a tentative agreement in August, was caused by a British Airways decision to buy rival U.S.-made planes, possibly jeopardizing the future market for airbus passenger

N.Y. Press-Manning Issue Delegated to Factfinder yesterday that there "appears to be a conspiracy" between the publish-ers of the city's other major dailies

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (UPI) — The New York Times, the Daily News and the striking pressmen's union, unable to agree on the number of employees required to man the presses, today agreed to let a factfinder resolve the issue while they continue negotiating other issues in the 79-day-old strike.

The two sides scheduled another negotiating session following a meeting of the Allied Printing Trades Council, a coalition of newspaper trade unions.

They agreed to compromise on the crucial issue of manpower levels early this morning during a 14hour negotiating session.

Although the parties agree in principle on a solution, resolution of the issue has been held up for several weeks because the two sides could not agree on the minimum number of pressmen needed to op-erate each press.

Theodore Kheel, adviser to the APTC and de facto mediator in the talks, said that both sides agreed to submit the issue to an impartial factfinder, who will make a decision binding on all parties. "This is not arbitration," Mr. Kheel said. "This is factfinding to a

He predicted that the talks "will proceed relatively quickly" with the manning issue out of the way.

Necessary Accommodation William Kennedy, president of the pressmen's union, called the tentative agreement "an accommodation that had to be made." Joseph Barletta, vice president and general manager of the News, said: "We're very pleased that we seem to have found a way to resolve the manning issue."

Mr. Kheel said that a factfinder, who would be "selected through a process the parties agree on," would compare press-room manning at the Newark (N.J.) Star-Ledger and The Times to determine the exact number of men that are employed at both plants.

Resolution of the issue has been stalled because the two morning papers and the pressmen have been unable to agree on the number of journeymen who perform similar duties at the News, The Times, the Star-Ledger and the Long Island newspaper, Newsday, the major suburban competitors of the New York City papers.

A number of other issues, and negotiations with three other unions, still have to be settled before the two papers can resume publication.

FERRARA, Italy, Oct. 27 (AP) - No one openly admits to be scared by a purported 16th century prophecy that this north Italian city will be destroyed by a huge ball of fire tomorrow. But many have been making arrangements to spend the weekend in the coun-"Not because we trust the prophecy but because weather is sunny and countryside trattorie [restaurants] cook excellent mushrooms in this period," Leda Torreggiani, a Ferrara resident. Hundreds of other Ferrara residents were known to be planning similar trips tomorrow. Nobody seems to know how it all started, but the impending disaster has become the major gossip in shops, public places and cafes here in the last few days. Toward Mideast Peace

Not without some jostling, the negotiation of an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty is proceeding apace. Jimmy Carter personally helped negotiate the compromise draft that both governments have now approved, Israel with certain amendments; Egypt demands some alterations, too. In gaining Cabinet approval of the draft, as in the Knesset vote terminating the Sinai settlements, Menachem Begin has been ready to put the drive for peace ahead of political loyalties cemented over 40 years. The two negotiating teams are again back at full strength in Washington, and they hope to complete a treaty by the anniversary of Anwar Sadat's Jerusalem visit on Nov. 19.

That is, in our view, the proper and posi-tive context in which to view the latest flap over Israeli settlement in the West Bank. Mr. Begin, to keep his opposition from spoiling the treaty with Egypt, wanted to show there was no literal or direct linkage between Israel's decision to evacuate the Sinai and its determinatio to hold on to the West Bank and Gaza, under new conditions, pending future negotiations. Evidently, he also wanted to retort politically to statements U.S. diplomats have made to Jordan and West Bank Palestinians to draw them into those later talks. Both purposes were served by his announcement that Israel will expand some existing West Bank settlements. The State Department pronounced itself "deeply disturbed."

It is a three-level charade. First, the Israeli announcement was entirely political, and, given that only a handful of those Israelis claiming a right to settle in the West Bank actually wish to live there, it may not lead to any new settlers. Second, the protests are also political, and there is no reason to think that progress toward an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty will be slowed. Finally, the logic of events will in time almost certainly produce an accommodation on the West Bank anyway. This is likely, no matter whether Israel makes provocative remarks on settle-ments or Palestinians decry Camp David or King Hussein holds himself aloof, as all are doing now.

The really important development right now has to do with the attitude not of Israel or Egypt, but of Saudi Arabia, Egypt's principal patron and banker. The Saudis, it appears, are coming around to a position of support for Mr. Sadat's peace policy. They're keeping the money flowing and trying to restrain attacks by other Arabs. They have just agreed, for the first time in 30 years, to let Israeli Arabs make the pilgrimage to Mecca. That is inadequate to those who insist upon nice, neat, hard edges on their politics. But it will be of great help to Mr. Sadat in standing up to the more radical Arabs' attempts to drag him down. The peace process, in brief, continues to move ahead.

Gifted Children

In recent years, the federal government has taken a series of belated steps to identify, encourage and nurture extremely bright children. In 1972, Congress set up the Federal Office for the Gifted and Talented, which has received $2.5 million a year since 1976. Another $6 million is channelled to giftedpupil programs through other federal agencies. But measured against other educational appropriations, those sums are far from overwhelming.

There are many explanations for the halfhearted approach. . . For one thing, young geniuses and their parents don't form a sizeable constituency. For another, efforts to identify gifted children conjure up dark visions of totalitarian "brain-farming." And finally, egalitarian-minded Americans. . . are often simply uncomfortable with the fact that nature deals some children a dramatical-

Fortunately, there are signs that such attitudes may be on the wane. A House-Senate conference committee in Washington has proposed increasing appropriations for gifted-children programs by more than 500 percent. The legislative change, of course, ought to be accompanied by a realization on the part of educators that the compassionate ends of "special" and "adaptive" education apply to the gifted as well as the deprived. . .

Neutron Bomb Backed

ly better hand than others.

The president is still reserving judgment about deploying the neutron bomb, but at least he has decided to get started on building it. For which small favor, we ought to be grateful.

The neutron bomb is not really a bomb; it is a warhead for short-range missiles and artillery shells. It is a nuclear weapon, but it has far less explosive effect -- blast and heat --- than conventional nukes. So it does less damage to the area in which it detonates...

This new warhead is made to order to deter - and to stop, if need be - the sort of armored blitz the Soviet Red Army has always favored for its offensives.

Therefore, quite understandably, the Soviet propaganda industry launched a worldwide campaign to portray this as an unthinkable weapon, too terrible to contemplate, let alone build.

Not so understandable, but at least predictable, was the next step: Leftist spokesmen around the world trooped right along with this Soviet lead, wagging their tails behind them. . . Not at all understandable indeed, downright incredible - was the earlier decision of our own commander in chief to bow to this self-serving. Soviet-led propaganda move and put off a buildup of the new and effective antitank defense for Western

With 40,000 tanks and armored infantry carriers to match, the Soviets now have the armored might to overrun Europe with one quick thrust. The neutron warhead gives the West a way to stop such a blitz. And when that warhead is built and deployed, it will give the Soviet brass pause, should they be tempted to launch such an attack.

On Storing A-Wastes

An interagency review group commissioned by President Carter concludes that nuclear wastes can be safely stored underground.

That is not news to anyone familiar with the research done by government and private groups in the 33 years since the first atomic bomb was exploded.

The plan is to inject nuclear wastes into geologic formations which have been stable for millions of years. The review notes there will be problems involved in such underground storage, however. Not technical probems, but political problems.

The reviewers said public consensus will be essential to the success of nuclear waste storage and therefore called for extensive public review of scientific information.

That is a reasonable approach. But it contains a basic problem. Consensus does not mean 100 percent agreement. The existence of a minority dedicated to stopping nuclear power development guarantees a fight to stop the disposal of nuclear wastes underground.

No means of disposal will satisfy this group, which contends nuclear wastes can't be stored safely. . . The problem is not how to store the wastes but how to deal with a minority that refuses to accept the decision of the majority.

Indexing Tax Rates

Following on the heels of such politically specialized terms as "sunset laws" and "zerobased budgeting," another word with governmental overtones has moved onto the scene.

Our reference is to "indexing" or "indexation," by which is meant, in its most familiar connotations, the gearing of tax rates to fluc-tuations of inflation. The purpose behind this recommended linkage is to prevent a taxpayer's being penalized by being forced into a higher tax bracket.

This example is being cited by congressional backers of indexations: a family of four with a 1977 income of $15,000 would need $16,200 in 1978 just to keep pace with the inflated cost of living. But the higher income, by putting the wage-earner into a higher tax bracket, would boost his tax obligation by $260, representing an outright loss.

The idea is picking up steam in Congress. but has some obstacles to overcome before it becomes incorporated into law, if indeed it does. Among them is the fear. . . it would produce unacceptable revenue losses.

The concept has considerable merit, especially with respect to its application to income taxes. . . The process is not as simple as some proponents would have us believe, but it certainly deserves careful considera-

The Forgotten Good News

By James Reston

WASHINGTON — Some unu-sual and even hopeful things have been happening recently in the politics of the world, and the surprising thing is that so little at-tention has been paid to their his-torical significance. For example:

After 40 years of bitter hostility, China and Japan, despite the open opposition of the Soviet Union, have signed a treaty of peace and friendship.

After two generations of war.

 After two generations of war, Israel and Egypt have at least agreed "in principle," despite the opposition of other Arab states and some political factions within the Begin government, to the Camp David terms of peace.

 The United States and the Soviet Union have made progress in the Vance-Gromyko talks in Moscow toward a second strategic arms agreement, and have also agreed to a new round of negotiations to limit military arms sales in Latin America and ban the introduction of military weapons in outer space.

 By lifting the arms embargo on Turkey, the United States has eased the NATO crisis in the Eastern Mediterranean and improved the chances for a Greek-Turkish compromise in Cyprus.

After all, this is not a catalogue of failures. Nothing has been settled, but the process of negotiation and even the spirit of compromise have improved recently moving on the economic and financial tangles of the major industrial nations and the racial struggle of sub-Sahara

The tendency now, and understandably, is to concentrate on the problems that remain — for they are serious and even ominous problems that could shatter the hopes of a better world order - but there is at the same time a more serious dialogue now between the nations about the common problems of peace inflation, population, and the cost of the arms race that should not be minimized.

The visit to Japan of the Chinese vice premier, Teng Hsiao-ping, il-lustrates this changing tone and de-veloping mood of compromise. There were some issues that couldn't be settled in a hurry, Teng said — for example the future of Taiwan, South Korea, and the con-flict between China and Japan over the control of the Senkaku Islands.

He didn't concede anything on these points, but emphasized the importance of avoiding "tension" and giving "time" a chance to work toward a settlement of differences over Taiwan and Korea Peking was "waiting" for Washington to make up its mind to settle the Taiwan question he said, but he emphasized, "on Peking's terms." He expected the division of Korea to be resolved "in due course." On the future of the Senkaku

Islands, he merely observed that China and Japan differed on this and had agreed to avoid trying to settle it now. It was a time, he suggested, in Kipling's phrase, for "judicious leaving alone." "By Chinese wisdom," Teng remarked, "this is the only way. It is shelved for an indefinite period of time." Perhaps, he added, the next generation will resolve the Senkakus prob-

Teng, in his first Western-style news conference, even introduced a more startling idea into the conduct of world affairs. According to William Chapman of The Washington Post, he told the reporters in Tokyo that he wasn't "very bright," and invited them to criticize him if his answers to their questions were unclear. No such concession or invitation has ever been offered by any politican in any press conference since Calvin Coolidge an-nounced that he "didn't choose to So apparently something new is happening now these days and no-body is quite sure what it is. Washington is in closer contact with Peking and Moscow than they are with one another. Tokyo is more deeply involved with industrial Europe and North America than it is with Asia, and is creating a more effective co-prosperity sphere in the Pacific by commerce than it was able to do by war in the tragic

The same confusion or doubt of policies is confounding or educat-ing the political parties here in the Soviet Union, the East and the ing the political parties here in the United States. Both Democrats and Republicans are losing the allegiance of their former liberal or conservative supporters. Carter is in deep trouble with Kennedy, McGovern, organized labor, the intellectuals, and even the blacks.

At the same time, the Republicans cannot organize that middle class, middle America constituency they used to talk so much about. At least they cannot organize it and they cannot organize them around their aging conservative leaders -Reagan, Ford and Connally - and they will not encourage or rally around the Bakers and Bushes of the rising Republican generation.

Still, maybe this is not all bad. Wherever you look in the world today, institutions are questioning their assumptions and prejudices, and having to adapt to events. Prime Minister Callahan of Britain, for example, is telling his old trade union colleagues that he will suffer their strikes this winter and even risk defeat at the polls rather than lose the battle against inflation. President Carter has read the news from California on Proposition 13, and is campaigning for tax cuts, and other conservative principles.

In short, there seems to be a new pragmatism moving in the world, some of it good, some of it bad and West. Most of the leaders, if that's the right word, have begun to doubt the ideologies and prejudices of the past, and are looking for new answers to the new problems of a different technological and philosophical age.

So far they haven't found the answers, but at least they are talking to one another and even searching with one another for comproms, and above all, trying to avoid confrontations and economic or physical wars. Nobody is saying, by God, he is right. Everywhere there is doubt, and maybe when there is doubt there's a possibility of compromise and even hope.

Ken Pottinger From Lisbon:

A mood of destruction is said to be advancing over the Alentejo, especially in the more remote and traditionally poorer eastern region.

ISBON — Carlos Mota Pinto, the 43-year-old law professor chosen as Portugal's latest premier, will find himself facing what 10 preceding postrevolutionary gov-ernments here have faced and failed to resolve — the explosive is-sue of agricultural reform.

Agriculture is a leitmotiv running through the country's political crises — it is vital to the success of Portugal's 1985 entry to the Euro-pean Economic Community and it hangs over the long-term economic recovery that the International Monetary Fund's austerity plan

But agriculture is also tightly bound up with party politicking — with the clarion calls of the radical revolution in 1974 — and with two ideologically opposed streams of thought: large soviet style coopera-tives and small uneconomic, pri-vately owned plots.

Wheat Belt

For several weeks, the Communist-dominated Alentejo wheat belt, located south of Lisbon, has been in an uproar. The country's presidentially-backed caretaker government has been returning to former owners, parceis of land illegally incorporated into 450 giant cooperatives four years ago.

The Alentejo was once the pre-serve of rich absentee landlords, huge fallow estates and exploited peasants. The revolution changed all that and brought about a much needed agrarian reform. But it is an incomplete reform and one lacking in sound technological followthrough.
Successive Socialist or Socialist-led governments since the 1976 parliamentary elections have declined to move decisively to put agricul-ture in order. There has always been the fear of offending poten-tially important electoral interests

No such obstacles have faced the interim government which, playing on this advantage, has acted forcefully to implement previously shelved legislation. As a result, there have been clashes between paramilitary police and peasants, sympathy strikes by industrial workers and harsh criti-cism from the Communist Party.

Sets of Ideas

However, a state of affairs where 33 percent of the labor force is employed in a sector which for many years has produced only 50 percent of Portugal's required basic foodstuffs, can obviously not be allowed

The agricultural ministry has one set of ideas for resolving the dilem-ma, the cooperatives another, and the conservative northern farmers. representing the second stream of thought, yet another.

But it is the Alentejo which is the hotspot at the moment and where just solutions must be found. Alentejo collective leaders say their units are being sabotaged by the removal of the parcels of land or reserves and they maintain the operation's long-term objective is to kill cooperative farming.

They cate several related events to back this thesis. Last year, they claim, the government's seed-supply program distributed the wrong type of grain to the collectives. So instead of a 10-to-1 crop yield, the harvest was only 3 to 1 and the effects on farming income were predictably devastating.

Agriculture credit has been cut off and even when the farms have a sound business deal, needing only shor-term financing, they have been denied the cash, collective workers say. (The government maintains that credit has been suspended in cases where the collective pended in cases where the collectives have not presented proper annual accounts and the aim is to stop money being squandered.)

Such then are the perceived complaints of collective workers in the region. Whether they are accurately aimed is less important than the fact that the grievances now appear to be determining actions. A mood of destruction is said to be advanced. ing over the Alentejo, especially in the more remote and traditionally poorer eastern region.

Some collectives are said to be stripping cork trees — cork is a ma-jor export — and selling livestock and farm machinery to liquidate as many assets as possible in anticipation of the demise of the collective

Flames Fueled

Adding fuel to the flames, is World Bank project to fund 156 private farms in the Alentejo where presently only 20 exist. To accommodate these plans, the process of returning illegally occupied land may need to be accelerated.

Successive agricultural minister:
have attacked low productivity and agricultural errors in the Alenteit as deliberate Communist-inpires sabotage —a symptom, perhaps, o. the heavily political nature of agri culture here. Cooperative workers, in turn accuse the government of draggin their heels when it comes to agricultural extension schemes, and tech nical and managerial aid for cor.v. cerns employing as many as 500 te and

1,000 men each. The clash is one in which neithe side can call itself the winner. Bu worse, it is a clash with grave impl cations for a stable and agriculturally self-sufficient Portugal. Experts do not rule out the chances of a good agricultural syllings tem based on mixed collective an, private farming for Portugal. By or enormous investment, much of from foreign institutions, is badi required, they say.

So although the collective idea not necessarily under threat, i continuing role as a pawn in confused political scene, makes a ricultural progress problematical.

Mugabe's Star Is Rising

By Tom Wicker

ONDON - Ian Smith, the po-L litical contortionist who seems to survive every twist and turn in Rhodesia's tangled politics and who causes most of them himself, has done it again. He publicly agreed to attend a so-called all-parties conference on Rhodesia's future "without preconditions" on the same day that his air force's destructive raids into Zambia made such a conference unlikely anytime

But British sources believe that these and other recent events in Rhodesia may have benefitted Smith less than the black national-ist leader, Robert Mugabe, whose guerrilla forces continue to operate with considerable effectiveness in much of Rhodesia.

By agreeing as a sort of climax to his visit to the United States, to take part in an all-parties confer-ence, Smith probably improved his remarkable position as a "moderate" in U.S. public opinion. But British analysts, students of Smith and the Rhodesian snarl since 1965, question whether his agree-ment is anything more than another maneuver to preserve his posi-tion and gain time.

Opposed

In their view, there is little likelihood that an all-parties conference can succeed, or perhaps even be held, because Smith is known not to have changed his views on key questions - in effect, preconditions. He remains opposed, for example, to the use of black nationalist armed forces in combination with the white-controlled Rhodesian Army to provide internal security pending election of a majority-rule government.

Smith's black partners in the interim government, Ndabaningi Sithole and Bishop Abel Muzorewa, have long been bitterly opposed to an all-parties confer-there's no indication that they have changed their minds, whatever Smith's tactics. They think it more likely that the black leaders merely went along with him in the belief that the conference would never be

For that reason, there is some speculation here that the raids on guerrilla bases (and allegedly on some refugee camps) in Zambia were designed — in addition to their military purposes — to enrage both black nationalist leaders and the "frontline" states that support Joshua Nkomo, the leader of the nationalist group whose Zambian bases were bombed, duly denounced the idea of a meeting with Smith; then he flew to Moscow, presumably to seek more aid. But President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia said more cautiously that he still supports an all-parties conference in principle, if it is conducted along the lines of the Anglo-U.S. proposals for developing a majori-ty-rule government. That is the kind of precondition that Smith has never yet been willing to accept.

For all his deliant talk, Nkomo was badly hurt by the raids on his bases in Zambia. Not only did he suffer considerable losses, but it was made clear to the world that he is powerless to retaliate against Smith. His 10,000 well-armed (by the Russians) men form what is essentially a conventional army, not a guerrilla force; and there is little doubt that if this army took its only available course of action - an invasion of Rhodesia - Smith's forces could crush it.

Nkomo's military weakness was thus dramatized on the heels of his abortive meeting with Smith last summer, when Smith invited him into the government. Nkomo said he could not accept unless Mugabe also participated; but then, as it is understood here, he was unable to ence, and African experts here say persuade Mugabe, who feared being a sort of junior partner to Nkomo and Smith. The net result is that Nkomo's year. prestige has been twice damaged -

first by disclosure of his secret dealings with Smith, then by the air raids. Meanwhile, the political standing of Bishop Muzorewa and Sithole has been diminished by their inability to rally black support to the interim government and bring an end to the guerrilla war: and both men have been tarnished by the way they have allowed Smith to dominate the interim government. His secret meeting with Nkomo last summer, for example, was a stunning vote of no confidence in his present black partners.

Mugabe's guerrilla forces, on the other hand, were untouched by the raids on Zambia and have not been seriously hurt by frequent Rhodesian ground incursions into their sanctuaries in Mozambique. The guerrillas operate effectively in a wide area — sometimes even in Salisbury — and are the single biggest reason why Smith probably will not be able to conduct elections, as he and his black colleague had promised, before the end of the

Gandhi Tries Comeback In South India Election

Less than ten days before a parliamentary by-election that is crucial to her attempt at a comeback, Indira Gandhi is again at the forefront of the Indian political scene.

As the former prime minister, 60, campaigns at her customary tireless pace through the constituency that pace through the consumency maishe hopes to represent in Parliament, the government here is watching nervously, and the remnants of the old Congress Party are bickering openly over a decision giving her tacit support giving her tacit support.

2 Britons Get Jail for Insult To Greek Flag

VERROIA, Greece, Oct. 27 (AP)

— Two British schoolteachers were sentenced today to seven months' imprisonment on charges of tearing down the Greek flag in this northern Greek city, after they were apparently provoked by youths making improper suggestions.

They appealed the sentence and were set free pending retrial. The court ruled that the action by the women was a serious insult to Greece and its history and completely inexcusable, regardless of the fact that they may have been drunk or provoked by local youths seeking their favors.

The two women. Elizabeth Richardson, 22. and Alison Whewell.
22. were arrested Tuesday after allegedly tearing down the Greek flag hoisted on the city's central post office. They were chased and seized by a policeman who witnessed the incident.

The court said that the women. both English-language teachers at Verroia's language institutes, instead of serving the sentence, may pay the fine of 300 drachmas or $8.50 a day. This could mean a fine of nearly $2.000 each over a 7-month period.

Another exiled dissident reported that the Czechoslovak regime was particularly worried about possible cooperation between dissi-dents in Czechoslovakia and Poland, "Prague has recently sent a top party official to Warsaw to persuade the Polish regime to adopt a tougher policy against dissidents in Poland," he said.

British Unions Agree to End 6-Week Hospital Strike

LONDON, Oct. 27 — Leaders of five labor unions agreed tonight to end a six-week strike that had crippled and closed down hospitals and reportedly resulted in the deaths of some patients.

Satisfied with a three-step approach to their demand for incentive bonuses for 3,500 supervisory workers, the union chiefs called for signs from its waiting list and had an immediate return to normal to close its accident unit for two working.

were not announced.

But the hospital system was expected to take some time to recover from the most damaging strike in the 30-year history of the National Health Service.

Machinery Halted

During their walkout, the strikers refused to service machinery, operate sterilizers or work laundries. The result: Six hospitals were closed, more than 9,000 hospital beds were left empty, more than 300 hospitals handled emergency services only, and more than 60,000 patients were added to waiting lists. Health Minister David Ennals pleaded with the unions a week ago. "For God's sake, go back to work and stop playing about with peoples lives. . There is no doubt that some people have already died."

Union leaders called that blackmail, but many doctors agreed with Mr. Ennals that the strike had

Mesrine: France's Anti-Hero

Gangster Has a Robin Hood Image

By Jane M. Friedman

PARIS (IHI) — Because of one man, a veter-an criminal lawyer with 25 years of service has retired; a freelance journalist has become a celebrity, and a major newsweekly has been indicted for glorifying a crime.

The cause of these changes, and others, is Jacques Mesrine, 41, the confessed author of 39 violent crimes, several of them murders, and a personality who has captivated France.

Mesrine, a sinewy man with dark hair, escaped from the top security section of Paris's Sante prison in May where he had been held since his conviction for armed robbery and at-tempted murder in May, 1977. That prison break was Mesrine's fourth.

Since his clandestine interview with freelance journalist Isabelle de Wangen, published in Paris Match in July, Messine has been silent. Police believe that he left the country in August when the great number of tourists made escape easy...

France's public enemy No. 1, nonetheless, remains an obsession and a legend here.
"He's got the Robin Hood image of the good bandit," said Jean Louis Pelletier, Mesrine's principal defender. Others liken Mesrine to Clyde, of the Bonnie and Clyde team, or to John Dillinger, the celebrated American bank robber of the 1930s.

'Charmer'

"He's charming and a charmer," said Miss de Wangen, who recently became Mrs. Pelletier. Her interview with Mesrine resulted in a lawsuit against Paris Match.

According to France's anti-gang brigade, an elite group of 50 who are trying to track Mesrine, the Paris prefecture receives several telephone calls every day from people who believe they have seen Mesrine — in a cafe, on the Avenue des Champs Elysces or in the Parc des Princes sports stadium.

While it can spend only a portion of its time chasing Mesrine, the brigade, too, is obsessed by the man. "Mesrine is a prisoner of his pride and his derring-do," said a high-level police. official. "He is likely to mount a spectacular coup — like kidnapping government officials."

Mesrine was born into a milieu of bourgeois embroiderers far removed from the truands or petty criminals he was soon to know. By the time he was in elementary school, he knew he would become a gangster.

"I am sure," he wrote in L'Instinct de Mort, his autobiography, "that if I were asked what I wanted to be when I grew up, I would have said gangster as other children say fireman, lawyer or doctor.

Several times he tried to go straight, and after he served his first prison term he became a talented draftsman. But even the responsibilities of wife and child did not make him reform. By 1974, the last time he was captured, he had:

Murdered a pimp.

 Attempted a kidnapping in Canada and escaped from prison there leaving two forest rangers dead.

 Returned to France and flamboyantly escaped in Compiegne, near Paris, by pulling a gun in court and threatening to shoot the judge. Executed innumerable bank robberies and petty apartment thefts and accumulated an impressive arsenal, hideouts all over France and a following of women who worshipped

The admiration for him apparently derives from what some see as a conscious moral code. and limitless courage, despite his propensity to kill. He has "an assemblage of qualities that appealed to women," said Mrs. Christiane Giletti, a lawyer for Mesrine who was speaking with him in the visiting room of the prison when he made his recent break. She was subsequently suspected of complicity and interrogated by police for 48 hours. The experience triggered her distillusionment with the French legal system and her resignation from the bar.

According to Mesrine's lawyers and to the convict's boastful autobiography, he is loyal to his friends and would do anything to bail them out of trouble, including an assault on a peni-tentiary, such as the one he mounted in Canada. He has a Mediterranean approach to honor and fidelity and would kill to avenge a friend's death or a woman's honor. According to police and lawyers, he keeps his word and expects others to keep theirs. He has justified his bank holdups by criticizing the excesses of capitalism and vowed that he would not hurt women and

Most of all, Mesrine loves to thumb his nose at the police, executing his coups with boyish humor even though he often has left in a bartage of guntire.

Once, according to his book, while being pursued by police, he disguised himself as a doctor and sneaked into a Paris hospital to see his dy-

"People admire courage," said a high-ranking police official in explaining Mesrine's magne-tism. "They don't admire him. They'd be afraid if he walked into their living room. But they say, 'Hey, that's a real man.'

"He's someone out of the ordinary," said Mrs. Giletti, who received an invitation from Mesrine in June to meet him on the quai of a Paris train station. Mesrine wanted to apologize for the trouble he had caused her.

"Above all, he is very French," said Miss de Wangen, the court reporter who sold her interview to Paris Match for the equivalent of $6,000. The issue containing the Mesrine interview was a best-seller, second only to the issue on the late Pope Paul VI.

"Mesrine likes to receive people and to eat well. He is charming, polite and macho a la vielle mode. He opens the door for women and lights their cigarettes. When he smiles, he can get anything from anybody. He is patriotic and would do anything for his country.

Miss de Wangen said that she has received several letters from single women asking for an introduction to Mesrine.

She met with Mesrine for six hours in the countryside near Paris after being driven there blindfolded. At his hideout, Mesrine opened a bottle of champagne. He peeled potatoes and roasted a leg of lamb. Dinner was accompanied by a good red wine. "For him, it was a festive occasion," said Miss de Wangen.

That Mesrine is almost certain to die violently is a source of sadness for some.

"It's a waste," said Pelletier who showed a visitor a New Year's card from Mesrine with an engraving of a blood-red face superimposed against a black guillotine. The card was evidence of Mesrine's artistic talents. Other cards dence of Mesrine's artistic talents. Other cards sent to Mesrine's publisher show literary flare. According to publisher Jean-Claude Lattes, Mesrine could have been a novelist. His book, a 333-page confession, has sold 13,000 copies since publication in March, 1977. Jean-Paul Belmondo bought the film rights about six months ago for more than $100,000. Theoretically, 50 percent goes to Mesrine, but in practice, his half will be frozen.

"This guy is a writer." said Louis Nucera.

"This guy is a writer," said Louis Nucera, literary director for Lattes. Mr. Nucera read the manuscript when it arrived through another lawyer, Genevieve Aiche. Miss Aiche was indicted for having distributed the book, al-though other lawyers say that Mesrine had permission to write it.

The question is why such a talented man diverted his energies to crime. In his autobiography, Mesrine does not really explain his need for violence and his lust for the seamy side of life. He attributes it to his "bravado, taste for risk and money." Stealing, he says, is a kind of

He hints, however, at a consistent need to gain his father's attention. Mesrine's father was often absent or preoccupied with work when he was growing up. Mesrine always felt hurt by this lack of parental approval.

But although Mesrine hints that his taste for crime is innate, his lawyers insist that different rcumstances might have made him an excellent soldier or spy. Police officials admit that the years of solitary confinement probably made rehabilitation impossible.

"The police played into his hands," said Mrs. Giletti. "They made him a star."

The answer to some of the questions may lie Mesrine's next book which will be published in Canada this year. However, other more important issues at the core of Mesrine's case the integrity of the legal profession, the rights of journalists, and the conditions of solitary confinement in prisons - have not been examined by the press or the government.

In the meantime, the French are waiting for Mesrine's next appearance. "He's got to steal," Pelletier said. "It's an economic necessity."

Ho Chi Minh City: A Portrait of Disaster

Facing antagonism from China and hampered by crop-destroying floods, the aging Communist leaders in Hanoi see only one solution: more enforced socialization, more confrontation, more repression.'

By Joseph Fitchett

DARIS, Oct. 27 (IHT) — Life I in Saigon, three years after its fall and rebaptism as Ho Chi Minh City, is marked by harsh misrule, political oppression, acute food shortages, economic mismanagement and rampant official corruption, according to four French journalists who recently spent 10 days there, gaining the most extensive access of any Western reporters since 1975.

Granted visas to report on "Cambodian atrocities," the French reporters — three of whom had written sympathetically about North Vietnam during the war - found much more to report about the Hanoi regime's "disastrous" policies in what used to be South Vietnam.

In their view, Vietnam's leadership, molded by a lifetime at war, has been unable to adjust to Facing antagonism from China and hampered by crop-destroying floods, the "aging Com-munist leaders in Hanoi see only one solution: more enforced socialization, more confrontation, more repression," the corre-spondent for Le Nouvel Observateur wrote.

The main impact of Hanoi's tough policies is in the south, where North Vietnamese officials "behave like an occupation force. . . while Saigon's inhabitants are cowed by hunger," Le Matin's correspondent wrote.

'Vietnam Gulag'

These views were corroborated by the reporters from Le Point and Le Monde. The report in Le Monde provoked an editorial about the "Vietnam gulag." By eluding official supervision, the four journalists managed to make contact with a number of South Vietnamese, including former acquaintances. In their articles and in subsequent interviews, they agreed that conditions there are grim.

In Ho Chi Minh City, all key positions are held by North Viet-namese officials, all Communist Party cadres, whose importance can be roughly ranked, on sight by the number of ballpoint pens in their open-necked shirts — "the only insignia they can afford," the Le Point correspondent said, only half jokingly.

The northern officials move about the city in curtained U.S. sedans and live in requisitioned villas, whose garden walls have been topped with wire barriers. "There is more barbed wire in Saigon today than under Thieu," said a reporter who had covered the last days of South Vietnam

under Premier Nguyen Van

The former U.S. Embassy has been converted into the central security headquarters, and pris-ons are undergoing expansion. The reporters were denied precise statistics, but they claim to have received information sub-stantiating Vietnamese refugee claims that there are more politi-cal prisoners today than there were under the Thieu regime. Le Van Duyet prison in Ho Chi Minh City, notorious for packing 25 prisoners to a cell in the past, today bulges with 50 prisoners per cell, according to a witness. That is more than one inmate per square yard, Le Matin's correspondent calculated.

Thousands Disappear

Thousands of South Vietnamese, including many former Viet Cong fighters, continue to disappear, the reporters said, often without trace, into "re-education camps," usually agriculture work camps lacking adequate nu-trition or medicines.

One million South Vietnamese have been "rehabilitated and released," Hanoi spokesmen contend, but the human rights issue has caused the EEC to hold up $4 million worth of proposed aid for a Vietnam resettlement

South Vietnamese who had expected to be able to cooperate with the new regime in 1975 have found their hopes dashed. Buddhists and liberal journalists who opposed the Thieu regime are said to be in prison again, this time at Hanoi's order.

"The only difference is that the arrest orders come from the Communist Party, not Thieu's courts," a reporter said, "and neutral observers are no longer allowed to inspect prison overcrowding."

Hanoi confirmed on Wednesday reports by Vietnamese refu-gees that the Buddhist leader Venerable Thich Thien Minh had died in a re-education camp 100 miles from Ho Chi Minh City. Mr. Minh had led opposition to successive regimes in South Viet-

The reporters had a brief meeting with Huynh Tan Phat, head of South Vietnam's short-lived provisional revolutionary government. He was quoted as having said: "Officially, we were sepa-rate [North Vietnam and the Viet Congl, but in fact we were the same thing all the time; there was a single party, a single govern-ment, a single capital, a single country."

This confirmation of Hanoi's historical control was all the more striking because Mr. Phat in the past had ardently maintained that North Vietnam would never "swallow" the south and would allow a three-year transi-tion period — which, in fact, ended only a year after the capture

The meeting with Mr. Phat provided a rare glimpse of a for-mer Viet Cong official. As usual, the reporters were handed a paper containing stereotyped re-plies to questions that they had posed in advance, and their North Vietnamese escort said afterwards that their account should be restricted to the written interview, ignoring Mr.

Phat's oral remarks. In Ho Chi Minh City, "whose streets appear too wide and too well-paved today for the amount of surviving traffic," many shops have shut, but those remaining about one in three - offer "a variety and quality of goods un-thinkable in Hanoi," the Le Point reporter wrote.

As a result, the North Vietnamese have decided to cut Ho Chi Minh City down to size, lit-erally, by reducing the popula-tion from 3.5 million to perhaps one million.

In an effort to drive Saigonese into the countryside, commerce has been nationalized and an inefficient ration system imposed. South Vietnamese are denied jobs commensurate with their skills. The reporters found that Cholon, the once-bustling Chinese quarter, has emptied about half of its million ethnic Chinese by truckloads in night-time raids organized by the authorities.

However, the Hanoi-dictated farm policy reportedly has backfired because of forced collectiv-ization, which provoked a silent peasant rebellion.

Crops Sabotaged

Irate peasants have started to sabotage their rice crops rather than raise it to sell it on the lowpaying official market. Pig-rear-ing, another traditional Vietnamese activity, has been prohibited in some areas in an unavailing effort to force more rice onto the market after farmers started feeding it to their livestock.

The food crisis - triggered by the end of Chinese aid to North Vietnam and U.S. aid to South Vietnam — has worsened because of severe flooding in the Mekong Delta and epidemics of pests due to new fertilizers. Instead of a green revolution Vietnam last year had a two-million-ton rice shortage. The figure has doubled this year.

The lack of food has become the overriding national issue.

Although the official monthly ration of rice is 12 kilograms for a normally-employed person, only one kilogram can be found at controlled prices, according to the reporters. An additional four kilograms are obtainable for the private market price, they said, but this amounts to half a technician's monthly salary. The substitute grains comprise the other seven kilograms.

These hardship conditions are giving rise to a rapid revival of corruption, the reporters agreed. To leave by boat, an ethnic Chinese must pay 12 taels of gold, roughly equivalent to $3,000, of which less than half reaches the government coffer. The rest goes of to semi-official middlemen, mostly North Vietnamese party officials.

Telling Letter

As further evidence of the conditions, Le Monde this week carried a letter obtained by its correspondent from a South Vietnamese intellectual and published under the title "The Revolution is Dead."

The letter, whose authenticity is vouched for by Le Monde, said: "Our people were fed up with the corruption and with the last war, and were ready to at cept something new. . . [but] we have tumbled from one war to another [against Cambodia], from one regime's corruption to another's, which is worse because of the incompetence and tyranny of a breed of officials who are loyal [to the party] but ignorant."
Faced with an economic crisis at home, the Hanoi regime has escalated its Cambodian war and gone on the offensive in Laos, where poison gas has been used against dissident Meo montag-nard tribesmen, the reporters said. This foreign policy can be explained partly by traditional Vietnamese fears of Chinese encirclement, but Hanoi's pro-Moscow leadership is also trying to divert attention from policy failures at home by mobilizing for victory abroad, they conclud-

The Superb Bronzes of Giambologna

By Souren Melikian

ONDON, Oct. 27 (IHT) - The one-man show devoted to loth century sculptor and bronze-maker Giambologna at the Victoria and Albert Museum points up the drastic change that has affected prevalent ideas about art in the last

For the first time, a major museom focuses on the work of a single Renaissance bronze-maker. Of the 269 mems, the majority are sta-mettes that would have been conremptiously brushed aside as so many specimens of "minor art" not long ago. Even more remarkable. no one can tell how many of them deserve to be classified as Giambologna's work.
The acceptance of that fact is in itself a major change in our approach to the art of the past. Art instoguns have lately become sing-ularly less dogmanic in their classi-fications and aesthetic assessments. Beauty of the highest order, it is now conceded, may be the work of a master's assistant or follower — if faily because we are must so often confess that we just don't know which is which. Born in 1529 in Doual, in the French-speaking part of the then-independent Flanders, Jean Boulogne trained under sculptor Jacques Dubroeucq, who had been to Rome and developed an Italianate manner. Probably around 1550, Boulogne went to Rome, where he fell under the spell of ancient Roman carving. In Florence on his trip home, he met his first rich patron, Francesco de Medici, who persuaded him to settle there.

Michelangelo's work in Florence was the second decisive influence on Giambologna's work. The first of his great marble group sculptures, "Samson Slaying a Philistine," preserved in the Victoria and Albert Museum collection, recalls a project of Michelangelo's of the 1520s, as Charles Avery points out in the catalog

Giambologna, however, made a major contribution of his own from the outset: He introduced a sense of motion into sculpture. His is a swift, swirling movement, caught at the point of extreme tension when a precarious balance seemingly is about to be undone. The masterpiece is his "Mercury in Flight," with the winged Greek deity stand-ing on tintee hours ing on tiptoe, body bent forward as in full run, right arm raised skyward and left arm bent at the elbow and twisted slightly rearward. It made Giambologna throughout Europe.

Lost Wax Casting

The reasons for the ambiguity lie in the techniques used by Giambologna and most Renaissance bronze-makers, and in Renaissance studio organization. The technique known as lost wax casting is ex-plained in the exhibition, with piecpianted in the extinution, with pieces illustrating all its stages; first the model, modded in wax over a fire-clay core; then a plaster shell in which it is embedded — excepting tubular openings made by sticking pipes into the shell while still soft; then the pouring of molten bronze through some openings; and finally the breaking of the shell and trimming of the bronze.

The artist naturally made the wax model himself. But after that assistants took over. The crucial operation is the afterwork done on Complicating matters further, casting went on after the Giambologna's death in 1608. The Grand Duke Cosimo II bought the artist's Pietro Tacca was carrying on the work. In fact, the catalogers remind us that he spent most of his life casting Giambologna's models and

No wonder that statements of many of his works.

Here, at least, after attention has been drawn to the fact, one does perceive nuances that take on great paintings that supposedly combine importance with closer inspection. A different surface treatment has given it a mirrorlike, nearly black patina quite unlike the oily and uneven patina, varying from olive-brown to maroon, of the 16th popularized as a picture postcard. But none of that could really justify century.

It takes several visits for the noninitiate to get accustomed to such fine distinctions, but so brilliant is Ivor Heal's layout, and so remarkable the selection — which includes most of the bronzes with secure provenances from early collections, and every known signed bronze by Giambologna save one — that the scale, but is one that does not deny it in his madness; he is quickly de-feated by events and is never able to piece himself back together. He is a primitive, direct in his emotions, in contrast to the sophisitication - real emotions disguised by assumed manners — that mark his daughters and their husbands.

and behavior are notably rougher than the younger generation's. From his first entrance, when he is

Lear's court and style of dress and perfunctory.

Have John Atkinson Grimshaw's fairy-tale, toy-like quality that vized as a fairy-tale strain of false a stained-glass window. It was a sweetness — perfectly attuned to world record for a Burne Jones the modern mood, wherein pure drawing, and, again, a surprise:

The price it fetched is roughly that of a good crayon drawing by Edgar

NEW TIME

On October 16 the Dow Jones industrial vember 18, 1974. Many investors were frightened, of course, or inspired to sell short. But the CAPITAL GAINS organisation was buying aggressively in selected growth areas—noting that previous compa-rable break had helped to create such bargains as MEMOREX at $2 before it went to $60. SYSTEMS ENCINEERING at $1. before it went to $25., and DATAPOINT at $5., on its way to $76. Out of the depths of last winter's scare period capital gains researchers culled more than two dozen New York growth stocks which doubled, trebled and even quadrupled during ensu-ing rallies. Now we're talking in our week-ly reports about big percentage gains we expect between now and the next cyclical packed reports as evidence of how we pur our research to work. Simply complete and

Ford Workers Reject Pay Rises Totaling 12.5%

From Wire Dispatches
LONDON, Oct. 27 — Union leaders at Ford Motor Co.'s British subsidiary today rejected pay rises totaling 12.5 percent. Earlier, the company boosted its pay offer to the 57,000 striking manual workers by adding a 4.5-percent "attendance" payment to its previous of-fer of an 8-percent raise in base pay.

Talks have been adjourned until

The new element involved an "attendance payment plan" comprising a lump sum to be paid each week to all workers who clock in on time and then work normal hours during the course of that

Meanwhile, talks on a new contact for 26,000 hourly paid workas at Vauxhall Motors ended toout any agreement. The General Motors subsidiary offered laborers a 4.7-percent increase in base pay, up from a 4.2-percent increase offered initially. It offered production men 5.5 percent, up from 4.5 percent and skilled workers 6.6 percent, up from 4.9 per-

The company also offered a 1.5percent attendance allowance for employees with good timekeeping records. The result would be an average boost of 7 percent, with topgrade workers earning 8.1 percent

However, market sources say that

This is what emerged after a week's meeting of high government officials of the 22 member nations of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development. They agreed last February to comply with the existing arrangement which came into force last April 1. Gilbert Morghelem, president of the OECD's export credit group, said today that the U.S. proposals had taken many countries by surprise, especially as they were presented so soon after completion of the existing pact, which was also approved by the United States. "What was more surprising to some members was the extent and nature of the U.S. proposals." he told a

The meeting asked the OECD secretariat to study the question and define a number of parameters if possible over the relationship between interest rates and exchange

W. German Prices Rise

WIESBADEN, West Germany, Oct. 27 (AP-DJ) - The West German October cost-of-living preliminary index rose 2.2 percent from October 1977 and was up 0.1 percent from September. In September, cost of living was up 2.2 from September 1977.

intervention by central banks in West Germany, Switzerland and Japan alone surpassed the $567-million figure last week. This would indicate that either central banks Japan also appeared to aid the dollar in today's trading.

News that the U.S. consumer prices rose sharply in September—higher than some market expectations—also put downward pressure on the dollar. Dealers once again accused the administration of 1.7550 DM, breaking yesterday's of 1.7550 DM, breaking yesterday's record 1.7585 DM, before finishing at 1.7615 DM, up 13 points on the day. It edged up against the yen at 178.60 and was virtually unchanged against the Swiss franc at 1.5045 versus 1.5047.

Against the French franc, the dollar edged up to 4.07125 francs. It dropped slightly against the guilder to 1.92 and against the Belgian franc, it eased to 28.71.

Sterling gained slighlty to $2.063 after climbing above $2.07. The Canadian dollar rose 60 points to 85.03 U.S. cents.
Britain's Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey said be-fore Britain would enter a European Monetary System (EMS) it would have to be shown that it would encourage growth; impose obligations on the countries with strong economies as well as on the weak nations; that it would be accompanied by drastic changes in Common Market agricultural poli-cy and the EEC budget and that it would not endanger the economic policies of the United States and the Third World.

Among other reactions to the dollar, West German Bundesbank president Otmar Emminger said in Hamburg that only when the basic determinants behind the world currency system are corrected, can a change in the "unrealistically low dollar rate" be expected.

West German Chancellor Hel-mut Schmidt said the fall of the dollar was due to psychological and speculative factors and not based on economic reasons. He also felt that President Carter's anti-inflation plan was a "good signal . . . but it certainly didn't fully meet

New U.S. Inflation Chief A Fighter on All Fronts

PARIS, SATURDAY-SUNDAY, OCTOBER 28-29, 1978

Published with The New York Times and The Washington Post

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (Reuters) - President Carter's new antinflation chief, Alfred Kahn, is a fierce believer in free enterprise who played a major role in the recent dramatic fall in world airline fares. As chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board for the past 16 months, he spearheaded the phasing out of government regulation of airlines, thus reducing fares, opening up new routes, and increasing both the number of passengers and airline profits.

Mr. Kahn, a 61-year-old free-market economist with a distinguished academic career, takes over his tough new job from Robert Strauss, Mr. Carter's special trade representative who has asked to be relieved of his anti-inflation responsibilities so as to concentrate on his main task as chief U.S. negotiator in the multilateral trade liberalization talks now nearing their critical final phase in Geneva.

No Illusions

It was thanks to the work of Mr. Kahn that Sir Freddie Laker, the pioneering British airline operator, was able to open up his cheap, nofrills Skytrain service across the Atlantic.

And it is thanks to Mr. Kahn that the CAB he headed for more than year will be phased out in 1985. Under legislation signed into law by the president this week, the board will simply be abolished when the industry it regulated is finally free of government rules.

Mr. Kahn, connected with Cornell University for more than three lecades as chairman of the department of economics, dean of the college of arts and sciences and member of the board of trustees, has no illusions about the challenges of his new job.

'Profound Social Problem'

"It seems clear to me that what we are dealing with here is a profound social problem, a problem that somehow is related to our whole society, to our whole way of life," he said after his appointment. "It is going to take not just a simple solution, but a devoted effort and cooperation of all of us. "We either demonstrate that we are an Amerian people or that we are just 200 million people at war with one

Mr. Kahn said he would be looking at government policies that restricted the economy, suppressed competition, inflated the cost of doing business and imposed unnecessarily burdensome regulations. The consequences of failure, he said, were ever tighter fiscal and nonetary restraints that would throw the country into a recession and bring about mandatory wage and price controls.

Air Fares Seen Increasing With U.S. Deregulation

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (Reuters)

— Air fares, which have declined substantially over the last year, are ty that fares on average will increase in 1979." But he did not see a major trend in prices developing expected to begin to move in the other direction now that President Carter has freed the carriers from government regulation, even though an increase is exactly the opposite of what the administration had in mind when the President signed the legislation earlier in

Analysts who keep close watch on the industry are not predicting large increases in ticket prices for air travellers, but for 1979 at least, they believe air fares will edge up-ward rather than decline further.

They suggested it probably is too early to tell the overall impact on the structure of the industry itself, but they believed the airlines in the as Delta and Northwest, would benefit most. Under the new law, the Civil Aeronautics Board's authority over routes will end in 1981 and its anthority to regulate fares and rates will end in 1982. At the time of the signing, Mr. Carter said the legistation will "en-

Pan Am Bid for National Stock NEW YORK, Oct. 27 - Frank

Borman, chairman and president of Eastern Airlines, vowed this week that he would vigorously fight any merger between National Airlines And, he said, he is against any further consolidation in the airline "If we really are going to

through this competitive era," said the former astronaut, "allowing mergers is going to set off a daisy chain of marriages and you are going to end up with a more concentrated industry. If they want to protect the competitive atmosphere and work more diligently toward protecting consumer prices, it makes no sense for them to allow the competitors to decrease in

He added that if the merger between Pan Am and National were allowed, then Eastern might have to enter into a defensive merger with another carrier.

lion when Mr. Carter assumed office 21 months ago. If the fiscal 1979 target is reached, it would be the smallest deficit since 1974. There has not been a budget surplus since Statistics released by the Treasury showed that the actual deficit for the fiscal year which ended Sept. 30 was $48.7 billion, a reduction of $2.4 billion from July's estimate. The analysis also contained a set of "economic assumptions" which predicted an inflation rate of 6-to-6.5 percent in 1979 "as a result of the new anti-inflation program and a more moderate rise of food

The Treasury also said the economy should grow at an annual rate of between 3 and 3.5 percent next year after a 3.75 percent rise in 1978. The 1978 prediction is slightly below the previous official esti-mate of 4.1 percent.

U.S. Consumer Prices Up 0.8%

DJ) — U.S. consumer prices climbed a seasonally adjusted 0.8 percent, or at a 9.6-percent annual rate, in September, the Labor De-partment said today. The September increase follows a 0.6-percent rise in August, a 0.5-percent increase in July and a 0.9-percent rise in June. On an unadjusted basis, the price index for all urban consumers in September stood at 199.3 percent of the 1967 average, up 8.3 percent from a year earlier.

After the announcement, White House press secretary Jody Powell said the increase was not encourag-ing. He said: "It is our view that these figures underscore the impor-tance of maximum cooperation and support for the president's inflation

A companion report on consumers' purchasing power showed that after adjustment for inflation, spendable earnings fell 0.3 percent from August when earnings declined 0.6 percent. Real spendable earnings were an adjusted 3.3 per-cent below year-earlier levels.

The department's revised index for urban wage earners and clerical workers rose an adjusted 0.7 percent last month following a 0.6-percent boost in August. On an unad-justed basis, the index rose 0.7 percent from August to 199.1 percent of the 1967 average, up 8.2 percent from a year earlier.

The department also reported that productivity in the private business sector increased at a sea-sonally adjusted annual rate of 4.5 percent in the third quarter. The gain, the sharpest since the 5.1-percent increase in the third quarter of 1977, compared with a 1.2-percent increase in the second quarter and a 4.5-percent decline at an annual rate in the first quarter.

Said Agreed on Beef, Oranges

TOKYO, Oct. 27 (AP-DJ) --- The United States has agreed in princi-ple to drop its demands for Japanese liberalization of orange and beef imports "for some time" in return for increases in Japanese import quotas for the products after 1980. Kyodo News Service reported today.

Bilateral trade in the key items had threatened to block an overall agreement in the Multilateral Trade Negotiations in Geneva.

Quoting government sources yodo reported the agreement calls for Japan to increase import quotas for oranges from the current 45,000 tons a year to 65,000 tons in 1980 and for high-quality beef from the present 16,000 tons to 30,000 tons IBM gave up 2% to 270, Du Pont in 1983. Japan also will expand orange juice import quotas from the present 3,000 tons a year to 5,000 tons in 1980, then increase the quotas 10 percent annually until 1983.

Foreign Ministry officials declined to comment on the report.

Foreign Firms Lift Investment in U.S.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (Reuters - Foreign firms announced 87 new investments in U.S. manufacturing in the third quarter and 269 in the nine months, making it virtually certain that foreign investments for all of 1978 will top last year's record of 281, the Conference Board said today.

The board said total value of the 56 investments in the third quarter for which figures were disclosed was $966 million and that more than 40 percent of the investments were in the electrical machinery fabricated metals and chemical industries.

Brazil Deficit Widens

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 27 (AP-DJ) - Brazil's trade deficit widened to $97.5 million in September from $54.1 million a year earlier, Finance Minister Mario Simonser said today. Exports totaled $1.15 billion and imports $1.25 billion. Government officials are predicting a trade deficit of around $800 miltion for this year.

Pure, the Brave, the Good; Isaac Sidel, New York Jewish cop.
"Blue Eyes" told of Monfred

Cohen, his angel detective, earnest, beautiful, not too bright. "Marilyn the Wild" told of Isaac's nympho-maniac half-Irish daughter, who al-ways said Yes when she hadn't always ought to. "The Education of Patrick Silver" dealt with a lurking defrocked officer for whom crimeprevention and crime are separated only by a hyphen. "Secret Isaac" portrays Isaac Sidel at the end of his tether, negligently falling in love, aging eaten, gloomy beyond redemption as he watches himself lose the ones he loves and himself also. The jackals are barking. Isaac the Pure feels much less pure these days.

The passions of Marilyn, Isaac and of the lovers and haters and magic criminals who surrounded them made "Marilyn the Wild" most engrossing as a story: real daughter, real father, real lovers and husbands and pickpockets and gangs. But it now seems clear that Charyn's real concern in these novels is not psychology, action or so-cial density but language. Out of the materials of the detective novel and urban realism, he has created the poetry of a furious rhetoric.

There is the energy and desperation of quest, but no possible way to discover the undefined grail of peace and connection with others. Charyn has perfected his voice as he lives in it and its laws are so certain that he achieves a densely felt life despite the absence of conventional feeling or motivation.

Fantasy Seems Real

Everything is fantasy and noth-ing seems merely "made up." These gargoyles yearn, hunger, bleed. One believes in the armor-headed tapeworm which eats Isaac and one believes that Isaac does not bother to remove it from his guts. One be-lieves in the hoods who study James Joyce, and the secret bank accounts that are in the names of Anna Livia Plurabelle and Molly Bloom. One believes that the teeth of a weary old Jewish boss cop walk near the ground as he pursues pimps and racketeers to Ireland just as one can believe that bureaucrats become giant noses in Gogol's St. Petersburg. The language of both Gogol and Charyn finds truths otherwise inaccessible.

limit, laid against familiar corruptions, lusts, puts one in a state of hallucination, neither awake nor asleep. The dream is alert, with perky ears and a nasty snarl. Charyn is an inspired liar who does not need to pretend he is telling the truth. Increasingly, he seems to be aban-doning his gritty knowledge and feeling for New York, cops, womverbs. He hits Chagall's cows with his violin and knocks them out of the sky.

Readily Accepted

The astonishing thing is how readily his enterprise can be accepted by the reader. Obsession is energized by gift; there is a lesson for paranoids in this - how not to waste their griefs. Isaac falls in love with a hooker, impregnates a politi-cian's wife, telephones his own old wife in the middle of the night, keens silently over the daughter who has been married seven times before the age of 30.
Isaac blackens his fate and lives as a hawking bum in a sleazy mid-town hotel, reaching for the secret connections leading from pimps and whores toward graduates of Columbia University. The worm gnaws. Isaac elects a slyly smile mayor by courting aged synagogue-goers with his silver tongue. Crooked retired cops slay his friends, his enemies, each other. The worlds of the police and prostiuntion are criss-crossed and finked, as indeed they really are. The cen-ter does not hold, but things happen. Language, subtle, bold, funny, extended into poetry, absolutely Charyn's central possession, keeps all this in order. A prime element of story is mag-ic, the unreal made real and the real made unreal. "Secret Isaac," and Charyn's rapidly accruing body of fiction, do the continuous, essential work of magic-making with an absolutely singular and piercing

Viking to Issue A Second Book By Mrs. Onassis

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (UPI) --Jacqueline Onassis' second volume for Viking Press, an illustrated vol-ume of Russian fairy tales, will be published Monday.

Reading these books produces a kind of manic enjoyment in Charyn's fans. They are not difficult to follow. The boiling invention leaves no sense of puzzlement. The pleasure of fantasy, of fantasy without the firm a sure of fantasy, of fantasy without the firm a sure of fantasy, of fantasy without the firm a sure of fantasy, of fantasy without the firm a year ago after working there for two years. two years.

She has since taken an editing job with Doubleday & Co. A Viking spokesman said Mrs. Onassis was drawn to her second book because of her first book for Viking, "In the Russian Style," a picture history of Russian costume published in connection with a Metropolitan Museum exhibition.

Vikings Overpower The Cowboys, 21-10

DALLAS. Oct. 27 (AP) — Fran Tarkenton, a master of the third-lown play, dazzled Dallas with his The Cowboys intricate offense stilliant play-calling and threw two ouchdown passes last night, lead-ng the Minnesota Vikings to a 21-10 National Football League victoy over the Cowboys.

The Vikings, struggling to retain heir National Football Conference Central Division title, raised their record to 5-4. The loss knocked Dallas out of a first-place tie with Washington in the NFC East. The Cowboys now are 6-3.

Jittery Dallas committed two blunders in the first period and Tarkenton made the Cowboys pay with two touchdown drives.

Tarkenton hit Chuck Foreman with a 4-yard touchdown pass after Larry Brinson had fumbled away he opening kickoff. And he whipped the Vikings on a 37-yard scoring drive after Tony Dorsett 1ad lost the ball on the next series. Rickey Young scored on a 4-yard un after Dallas' second turnover finally got into gear in the second quarter with a long drive to the Vikings' 8-yard line, where a third-down Roger Staubach pass was underthrown. Rafael Septien drilled a 25-yard field goal, making the score 14-3.

Tarkenton's 12-yard touchdown pass to Sammy White with 29 seconds left in the second period gave the Vikings a comfortable 21-3 lead at halftime Tarkenton came out throwing again in the second half but the embarrassed Dallas defense stiffened and Staubach took control for a 63vard scoring drive in eight plays. Tony Hill ran 29 yards with a punt return and snared an 18-yard pass from Staubach to put the Cowboys on the Vikings 1. Robert Newhouse barged across for the score at 5:03 of the third period and it appeared that Dallas was

Olympic Gold Medalist Wins Men's Gymnastic Crown

27 (AP)— Olympic gold medal-ist Nikolai Andrianov of the Soviet Union took the gold medal today in the men's individual combined exercises at the world gymnastics championships here with a score of 117.2. Eizo Kenmotsu of Japan won the silver medal with 116.55 and Alexander Ditiatin of the Soviet Union was third at 116.375

The Soviet gymnast, who ear-lier in the week seemed hopelessly error prone, turned in a stellar performance, climaxed by 9.90 points on the rings and two 9.85s on the floor and vault exercises.

His performance settled speculation over his ability versus Japanese former world champion Shigeru Kasamatsu.

Kasamatsu missed the 1976 Olympics because of an operation, raising speculation that Andrianov's gold medal there was a hollow victory. But the Japanese placed only 7th here. Reuters reported that Kasamatsu ruined his chances by falling off in the middle of his exercise on the pommel horse, a discipline that requires great control and strength.

The other top placers were Eberhard Gienger of West Germany, fourth with 116.20, Hiroji Kajiyama of Japan, fifth with 115.90, and Kurt Thomas of the United States, sixth with

Italy Auto Club Says Prix to Stay at Monza

ROME, Oct. 27 (AP) - The Italian Automobile Club said today that next year's Grand Prix of Italy Formula One race will be held at the Monza track, contradicting yesterday's announcement in London that it would be shifted to Imola, near Bologna.

The announcement was expected to trigger a war between Italian organizers and the Formula One Constructors Association that has criticized the Monza track repeatedly as too dangerous. Swedish driver Ronnie Peterson was killed in a 10-car crash at the start of this year's race.

Broncos Hold Slight Edge Over Seahawks

By William N. Wallace NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (NYT) — Like Denver a year ago, the city of Seattle has generated tremendous enthusiasm for its football team. the Seahawks, and every seat in the huge indoor stadium, the King-dome, will be filled for Sunday's game. Denver Broncos, are the opponents. Previews of all games follow, with won-lost records in

American Conference

Denver (5-3) at Seattle (4-4) Broncos won the earlier game, 28-7, but it was on grass in Denver. Seahawks thrive on the Kingdome's speedy AstroTurf. Their big scorer, David Sims, who has eight touch-downs, won't play and Don Testerman is the replacement. Denver's running game has worn thin and Craig Morton had to try 33 passes in loss to Baltimore. That's not the Bronco style. Betting line: Denver by 31/2 points.

New York Jets (5-3) at New England (6-2) — Patriots are rolling with five victories in a row. The speed of Horace Ivory, No.-2 halfpack, is the latest embellishment. Jets' Matt Robinson, the neophyte quarterback, looked good against Bills, Colts and Cardinals but Pats' linebackers are of a different kind of steel. His best chance will be to throw outside to wide receivers. Betting line: New England by 9. Baltimore (3-5) at Miami (5-3) —

Now Bill Troup is out with a broken hand so Colts' quarterback choices are Mike Kirkland or Bert Jones who is still healing a sore shoulder. Their defense has finally tightened up and Miami hopes its defense will too. Bob Griese is back at quarterback and as effective as ever. Betting line: Miami by 12.
Buffalo (3-5) at Cleveland (4-4)

Browns still have not recovered from 20-point loss to Pittsburgh two weeks ago. Now Cleo Miller, the fullback who can block so well, is out. Brian Sipe, the quarterback hurt last Sunday, is ready. Bills have not been the same since the Jets thrashed them, 45-14. Their offense vanished and they never had much defense. Betting line: Cleveland by 614.

Houston (5-3) at Cincinnati (0-8) - Houston's three long touchdown drives, featuring Earl Campbell, were tremendous against Stéelers. In the past, Oilers have never sustained their success for long. But Dan Pastorini is the league's leastsacked quarterback this season. Bengals' leading asset is the punter, Pat McInally, who has had plenty of practice. Betting line: Houston

Kansas City (2-6) at Pittsburgh (7-1) — When Chiefs fall behind early against strong teams they die because the run-oriented offense cannot play catch-up. That's likely to happen in this game. Betting line: Pittsburgh by 14. San Diego (2-6) at Oakland (5-3)

Both teams played horribly last Sunday. Raiders won the earlier game in San Diego, 21-20, on Ken Stabler's forward fumble. He has had 19 passes intercepted or 9 per cent of his attempts and some were HOLIDAYS & TRAVEL

National Conference

Tampa Bay (4-4) at Green Bay (6-2) — Since their 26-game losing streak ended last December, the Buccaneers have won 6 of their last 10 games and respectability. Doug Williams, the erratic rookie, is a powerful rollout quarterback who will give the wobbly Pack fits. Bucs' tough defense will force Packers to pass and they are not too good at. that. Betting line: Packers by 5½.

Detroit (2-6) at Chicago (3-5) — Lions finally found an offense and scored 31 points on San Diego. The new quarterback, Gary Danielson, has helped. Bears have now lost five in a row and Walter Payton gained only 34 yards against Tampa Bay. Defense cannot hold any-one for long with new cornerbacks games? They certainly can. Steve Pisarkiewicz will be the quarterback again and Jim Bakken, the 38-year-old kicker, will also punt be-cause Steve Little, the disappointing rookie, has a sore leg. Eagles have lost their best blocking back, Mike Hogan. But their fine defensive team will be in command of this game. Betting line: Philadelphia by 11.

San Francisco (1-7) at Washington (6-2) — Redskins will replace injured Lemar Parrish with Gerard Williams who was burned often at cornerback last season. Joe Theismann has fine opportunity to regain his passing skills against a vulnerable defense. John Riggins has been carrying the offense. O.J. Simpson somehow has gained 532 yards for 49ers. Betting line: Washington by 10½.

New York Giants (5-3) at New Orleans (4-4) — What's the value of Orleans (4-4) — What's the value of an offensive tackle? Giants will find out as Gordon King, a raw rookie, replaces injured Ron Mikolajczyk who had played so well. King is matched against Elois Grooms, a good defensive end. Larry Mallory must hold up at strong sefery in place of Beasley Recognition. ry Manory inust need up at studies safety in place of Beasley Reece, also out for year. Saints' Archie Manning having a big season with 60 per cent of his passes completed. Betting line: New Orleans by 1.

Los Angeles (7-1) at Atlanta (4-4) — Rams won the earlier game at home, 10-0. Penalties and turnovers were behind their loss to Saints. Good teams usually bounce back after an upset, don't they? A field goal with one second left enabled Falcons to beat feeble 49ers. The quarterback, Steve Bartkowski, is doing a lot better. Betting line: Los Angeles by 7.

In Meeting With Arizona

UCLA Coach Fights Overconfidence

NEW YORK, Oct. 27 (UPI) -UCLA may be thinking ahead to its Nov. 18 meeting with the University of Southern California as the key game in the march toward the Rose Bowl, but the Bruins can't afford to relax tonight against a newcomer to the Pacific-10. Ari-

UCLA is a 13½-point favorite over Arizona. The game could turn on the way the teams react to what happened last weekend. UCLA, 4-0 in league play and 6-1 overall, is coming off a 45-0 romp over California in which it set a Pac-10 record with 10 interceptions. Arizona, 1-1 in conference play and 3-3 overall, had the weekend off to regroup after losing at California, Judging by their showings against California, UCLA might be expected to wallop Arizona by 50 or 60 points. But Bruin coach Terry Donahue is showing repect for the Wildcats and possible concern that his team may go into the game with too much confidence.

"Arizona has a great advantage players as UCLA." with the week's bye," Donahue said. "Arizona can't be taken lightlv. I've seen films of their game with Michigan and it was dead even. Michigan had trouble nunning on them with any degree of consistency. They hurt them throwing the ball."

Transactions

Milwaukes — Signed guard Norm Van Lier and placed rackie Delmer Beshore on walvers. Chicaga — Acquired center Scott Lloyd from San Diego for future draft choices and placed guard Andre Watefield on waivers.

San Diego — Signed free agent forward Bob

New Orleans — Signed free agent tachte Bill Filer; placed guard Gary Anderson on injured

UCLA has posted four victories 531 yards and six touchdowns, in a row — Minnesota, Stanford, respectively. Washington State and California after losing in its third week at Kansas, 28-24.

Said Donahue, "If we didn't learn from the Kansas game, then we are not a very smart team. We cannot afford any letdowns at this stage."

Along with Arizona State, the Wildcats dropped out of the West-ern Athletic Conference and joined the old Pacific-8 this season. Arizona's league victory was a 21-7 decision over Oregon State. The Wildcats lost, 21-17, at Ann Arbor,

With Oregon and Oregon State coming up on the Bruin schedule after Arizona, UCLA has the edge in the race for the Rose Bowl. Rose Bowl preseason favorite University of Southern California, with a 2-Pac-10 mark, will meet UCLA Nov. 18.

In other games this weekend, Oklahoma hosts Kansas State, Penn State visits West Virginia, Alabama entertains Virginia Tech, Nebraska hosts Oklahoma State, Maryland visits Duke, Southern California entertains California. Texas hosts Southern Methodist University, Michigan hosts Minnesota and Houston entertains Arkansas.

A Houston-Arkansas clash is one of the showcase games on tomorrow's schedule. Arkansas is coming off a tough loss to Texas and will be going against a team that ranks second in the Southwest Conference in total offense.

Three of the SWC's leading shers — Emmett King and Ran-Love of Houston and Ben Cowins of Arkansas — will be in

If It's Monday, This Is TV Week

WASHINGTON — The saying that one can't play God doesn't hold true for television networks. They are playing God every week, at least it seems like that vhen you read about the fight for television ratings.

In the B.S. (Before Silverman) days, the networks used to move shows around if they weren't working But as the competition got tougher and the stakes higher, they began to move nights around. Now that we're into midseason, all the networks are starting to do that Buchwald to see if they can come up with better Nielsen numbers. This is what is going on. There is a large boardroom. At one end are charts of all the shows on each network schedule and the nights they appear on the air. They're hung on hooks so they can be moved Zellerbach, the network's Vice President in Charge of Darkness, says, "All right, let's face it. Mon-day didn't work. Let's move Monday night to Thursday."

Trembling, the program director, says, "Wait. Thursday is starting to look strong. If we put Monday night in there we could lose our

Piltdown, the Vice President for Sales, says, "Where would YOU put Monday night?"
"Friday," Trembling says. "I wanted to put Monday might on Friday from the start, but you guys fought me and said Monday night should be slotted on Monday."

"That was at the beginning of the season," Zellerbach says. "We had to give it a try on the night we had it originally scheduled for."

Ringading, the network's affiliate man, says, "Suppose the sta-tions go along with you putting Monday night on Friday. Where do you intend to put Friday?"

"On Monday?" Trembling says.
"It won't work." Zellerbach says. "We're not doing any better on Friday than we are on Monday. If we're going to move Monday fur-ther down the week we have to move up something strong in its

"What's wrong with Wednesday?" Piltdown wants to know.

"Not Wednesday!" Trembling shouts, "Wednesday is our strongest night. If we put it on Monday we could lose not only Wednesday but Tuesday as well."

Ringading says, "I'm not so sure. If we could start off the week with Wednesday, we could pick up points for Tuesday as well as Monday, if it was slotted in Wednesday's place.'

Zellerbach says, "We can give it a try. If it doesn't work, we can al-ways put Wednesday back beginning the first of the year."

"Does anyone want to talk about Saturday? "Do we have to?" Piltdown says.

"Well, we can't leave it where it is," Trembling says. "I think Satur-day should be on Thursday." Zellerbach says, "Do you think our Thursday night audience can wait until Saturday to see it?"

"Yes," says Trembling, "because we move Saturday to Thursday the other two networks will be forced to counter-program us with their Saturday shows. Once they panic, we'll move Thursday back to its original place and sweep the Trembling says, "You forgot Sunday night." "I must be getting groggy. What are we going to do about Sunday?" Zellerbach says.

Piltdown replies, "Why can't we leave Sunday where it is?" Ringading replies, "Because we'll confuse the audiences. We can't move the entire week around and leave Sunday alone." Trembling says, "He's right. Maybe we could sneak Sunday in on Tuesday, except for the football

Piltdown says, "Why can't we move the football games, too?" Zellerbach says, "Who do you think we are — God?" By Paul Richard WASHINGTON, Oct. 27 (WP) — Nelson Rocke-feller has a lot of money — he is. as the song says, as "rich as Rockefeller" - but he returned to Washington this week to make more.

Once he was vice president of the United States. Today he is a 70-year-old salesman, and is good at his trade

Like most successful salesmen, he admires his own wares. "Isn't that just beautiful?" he asks, beaming with delight at a photo he is peddling. The lighting is the best that I've ever

The photo, a "Cibachrome" he calls it, shows a 1910 canvas by Picasso. You can buy it, framed — the photo, not the painting — for $850. It is on sale in the upstairs gift shop at Neiman-Marcus here.

Also available are the plates, andirons, statues and candlesticks he's selling. Rockefeller calls them beautiful reproductions of great art." 16,000 Pieces

He began collecting half a century ago, and he calculates that he now owns some 16,000 pieces - European and Chinese porcelains. American weathervanes, paintings by Cezanne, Degas, Bonnard and many other Degas, Bonnard and man, masters, and tables, earnings, toys. His new catalog (his first he says there will be more) offers reproductions of 124 of his collection, and includes a little of everything. Most are being made in unlimited editions.

Nelson Rockefeller

How should one address him? Governor? Mr. Vice President? 'Hey, just call me Nelson," he said, hand outthrust.
Several of his old friends here believe they can explain his going into business. "He's competing with his brothers," said one of them. "All those years while they were out there earning money, he was busy spending it on political campaigns. He is trying to replenish the Rocke-feller coffers. He's selling his houses and his reproductions. He's trying to catch up." Comments Rockefeller: "That may be an underlying motive, but I happen to feel art is a major force in people's lives. You need to lose yourself, to find tranquility in beauty. It's a joy I want to share." He has begun to share it by entering what he calls "big business." Already he has hired 13 people, and he has mailed out 470,000 copies of his gold-and-purple mail-order catalog. "Tru-ly great works of art have withstood the test of time and steadily gained in appreciation. . " goes part of his "Dear Friend" note. "Indeed, art is even being purchased as a hedge against

Sneers

Rockefeller knows that many in the art world sneer af the idea of prestige reproductions. "I expocied a lot more criticism," he

"Why spend $7,500 for a copy of a work just because he owns it?" asks one local art historian Why buy his export china? There is no shortage of originals. I wouldn't pay a nickle for one piece of that shlock." "His pieces cost as much as many respectable originals," ob-serves Joshua Taylor, director of the National Collection of Fine Arts. "I don't object to simple. reproductions, but his pretend to be surrogates for the actual objects. Why don't people go out, use their eyes and buy works of art on their own?" Rockefeller's bronzes, copies cast from Rodins and Nadelmans and African originals, seem to be good copies, but the "paintings" he is selling an-nounce themselves as phonies at first glance. When one looks at an original, the shadow-casting brushstrokes and threads of woven canvas are seen in three dimensions. In Rockefeller's photos, they've been flattened into two.

"I happen to have a Cibachrome in my home right now. Nobody who comes in can tell the difference," Rockefeller says. The difference between an original and a copy might ap-pear quite narrow — if you look at art as decoration," says Carter Brown, the National Gallery's director. "But scholars and museums see that gap as a chasm. Museums have an obligation to authenticity and history. Nelson Rockefeller is a private individual, not an art museum. This is a free society. He can do anything

Nibbling off 'Meissen'

During his tenure as vice president, when Rockefeller lived in Washington, he was rarely seen in galleries or museums, but he did keep up with art through photographic reproductions. "I read catalogs every night," he says. At home he eats off Meissen plates that are copies of antiques. At his office he hangs Cibachromes. "I have increas-ingly, myself, shifted over to reproductions." Rockefeller maintains, with a PS: "Sales are going very well."

Movie Stuntwoman Solos El Capitan

Beverly Johnson, 31, of Los Angeles, reached the summit of El Capitan in Yosemite National Park in California, the first woman to solo climb the sheer, 3,000-foot vertical wall. After the movie stuntwoman finished her 10-day climb. she hiked down a back trail to Yo-semite Valley. Chief park ranger Bill Wendt, describing the climb, said, "It's risky to climb it with a dozen people. We had a triple fatality May 14. All three came off. To do it solo is really quite a feat." Admits Johnson: "Lots of times I thought I would give up. But there were not any choices. If you stood on one of those ledges and looked down . . . You just go up." The slender, muscular woman carried about 100 pounds of gear - including a tent, sleeping sling, ropes, food, water, and pitons to hamme into the sheer granite wall. Her next stop: New Guinea, where she'll parachute into the jungle,

She's been a star - both in show biz and as a representative at the United Nations — and she's writ-ten five books, but that's not enough for "Pearlie Mae." Now, at 50, Pearl Bailey is pushing for a college degree at Washington's Georgetown University where she's enrolled as "an upper freshperson." Says she: "I always wanted to be a teacher. . . As in the Bible, 'Be ye also ready,' I was in the hospital in August. Suppose I could never do anything else? I could sit and teach. I will have that paper [diploma] and if I am called on, I am ready."

French Doctor Prescribes Wine for What Ails You

The fact is that Maury, who says ditions because that wine contains he drinks a liter of good wine every day and has done so all his life, looks a good 10 years younger than his actual 76.

Maury's theory is simple. All wines have about 250 different ingredients, largely drawn from the minerals in the soil. Many such minerals - potassium, magnesium, sodium and iron — have various curative properties. Their proportions in wines vary with the soils on natural potassium, and potassium tends towards controlling the retention of water involved in allergies. Graves is similarly recom-
